CashLINQ -- Security Update

Spokane, Washington – November 1, 2006 – CashLINQ prides itself in having one of the most high tech, reliable systems in which our customers can process their payments. In order to best serve our customers we are constantly looking for ways to improve. CashLINQ's latest improvements include the hiring of a Risk and Compliance Manager and the completion of our PCI Audit.

James Hill has been hired as the new Risk and Compliance Manager; he will be working to keep CashLINQ and the processing systems compliant with payment processing best practices and security regulations. He will also work to further enhance our internal risk management data base. James will also be working to enhance our internal risk management database.

James is a graduate of Whitworth College and has worked for twelve years in the banking industry, with experience in many facets of the business – from frontline service, to operations, sales, and management.

We are also pleased to announce the completion of our PCI Audit performed by Security Metrics. The audit includes building and maintaining a secure network, protecting cardholder data, consistently updating anti-virus software, regularly monitoring and testing networks as well as maintaining a policy that addresses information security. Although we always strive for this sort of perfection the audit allows us to verify our security standards so our customers can be confident that we are providing the best possible service for them and their customers.
